Play area: 6x6 squares. Each square in the board is a room. There are two layers in the dungeon, the inner and outer. The outer layer has dimensions 4x4 squares, the inner has dimensions 2x2 squares, for a total of 8x8. New rooms are opened to the dungeon randomly when the inner dimension has been fully explored. Each room contains two actions and an event. From a unique board design, multiple endings and unlimited replay, to an intense challenge that makes you practice your skill of memorizing complex sequences, Soul Shifter is a game for many types of players. Some call it a "Mudhoney" in fact. To start a game, a player places his creature (An Elemental lord - a creature that has a piece of a soul) in a room of the dungeon and deploys two cards into the dungeon as well, one is an event and the other an action (the Elemental lord can use only one of the two actions per room). The event is generally unpredictable - it could trigger several cards in the game or just the rules of the current round. With the cards drawn, the players take turns to perform their actions, and their opponent as well. If you play with another two players, each player takes turns to use their actions. If both players activate the same action, they both go in order, from the first player to the second one, so that it must be remembered to play actions when you have to counter an opponent's action. The board shows all the objects that are present in the dungeon as long as the inner layer has not been fully explored. A character can travel in the dungeon, using a card to activate the move action to one of his or her room's neighbor and bring a card into that room. Only when the square of that room has been fully explored (via cards or movement) is the card added to the board. A pretty epic

About Dreambig Software: Dreambig Software is an independent video game developer that combines our in-house experience with the highest quality production values. Our goal is to provide our customers with great games and an enjoyable gaming experience. We create games for the PC and mobile platforms. Each game we create is inspired by a wide range of topics and themes. Try to love the game. I'm just trying to give my honest opinion. Ive been playing this game since it was in beta and its grown into something great. the game is definately fun, and I can be pretty picky about games so it was suprised when I like this one so much. Liked it so much I played it for a few hours. this game has great action in the single player mode and online multiplayer. Cons When you see all these great reviews about having 4 maps in the game I was suprised, I was expecting 4 maps as well. But ok, I was wrong. I decided to stop playing the game after about 6 hours. (no maps to play, not fun) So if you get the game, play the single player mode but don't expect maps. Gameplay 4players game Graphics Good graphics Sound Good sound Replay value Mediocre Story BAD Gameplay Great Graphics Good Sound Good Replay value Great Story Mediocre I've seen this game all over the net! drool For those of you who are fond of games like Call of Duty, don't give up on this game. It's not for you. But for you this game is just pure awesome. I played this game for about 3 hours, and it was like: This game is absolutely fun. Something new. Sometimes you feel like you're playin' it for the first time. I was surprised when I first played it because I was expecting a Call of Duty clone. Surprise I say! c9d1549cdd
