These works are regarded as among the first examples of modern fantasy literature. Biography Machen was born on 6 April 1863 at 8 Edgeley Grove, Dulwich, South London. His mother was Frances Mary (née Glass), the daughter of wealthy brewers, and his father was Frederick Arthur Machen, a civil servant who also wrote poetry. He was educated at Trinity School, Cambridge, and then at Christ's College, Cambridge, from which he was expelled for misbehaviour. From 1887 he edited for a short time the literary quarterly New Review. He made a trip to the Crimea in 1892 and wrote of it in an article, 'The South'. The following year he married Mary Hilton, who he had met on the trip. Machen's most famous story is "The White Court", which was first published in The Yellow Book in 1895. It was later included in The Hill of Dreams, which came out in 1902. "The White Court" is one of the first horror stories to use supernatural elements. It is loosely based on the legend of Barabbas. A popular version of the story was made in the 1940 film The White Witch and later books such as Cthulhu's Companion. The next year he published "The Great God Pan", which is a play in two acts about the god Pan (sometimes called Pan or Apollo). The play, which was a collaboration with William Archer, was translated into French and adapted by Colette for her novel Dom Juan. In 1904 Machen published "The Starlit Mere". In 1909 the Machen family moved to Ashtead in
