The goal of the 10th Conference was to bring together the finest young scholars and leaders in the research and application communities of Earth current and irregularities research. Over 180 abstracts were submitted by around 70 scientists. The goals of the conference were to review the state of the art of the science of Earth current and irregularities research, to promote new fundamental research, to provide the general community with a sense of the state of the field, and to clarify how best to present the findings of the research community. Furthermore, we aimed to develop a community of researchers and practitioners interested in Earth current and irregularities research. The conference consisted of plenary lectures, panels, posters, and a workshop. The three plenary lectures were given by the Chair of the Organizing Committee, William Windley, the Director of Earth Currents and Irregularities Program at the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR), and the President of the American Geophysical Union (AGU). The conference also included eight special symposia focused on specific topics in Earth current and irregularities research, presentations of noteworthy lectures and posters, and a workshop. A major highlight of the conference was the opportunity to hear oral presentations by the world's leading research scientists and practitioners on
