I Am Love 2009 Movie 12 \TOP\

the girl with the dragon tattoo is a swedish-language "high-concept-latter-day-tragedy" feature from the director of the girl with the dragon tattoo and made on a rather small budget. it is based on a series of already best-selling books by then-unknown swedish writer and playwright stieg larsson, who died in 2004 at the young age of 50, allegedly from a gunshot to his head. the film begins with a man named martin vanger seeking to interview a young woman named lisbeth salander on behalf of her father, the reclusive billionaire and godfather of the anti-globalization movement, vanger industries. martin takes lisbeth salander to an island retreat where he falls in love with her. but when lisbeth is sentenced to multiple life terms in a maximum-security prison after a trial which portrayed her as insane, martin must now contend with an international conspiracy in which lisbeth was framed, and he must rescue her from a psychologically and physically brutal prison system. it is stated that marco bellocchio made i am love with the intention of making a film that, «shows what a man in love feels and means» (guadagnino). while the end result is probably a bit more complex, the realism of bellocchio weaves a wonderful connection with the characters, especially the adolescent boys. for antonio, his love for emma leads him to a bittersweet understanding of what love means in life. after all, what could make a man into such an odd hybrid of a mother and a father? what, i wonder, made him a lonely widower in life? in i am love, bellocchio creates a film that has only a few scenes where the work is plain to see. the grey of the skies, the pale colours of the environment, and light particles in the wind create a very realistic atmosphere. this doesn't of course preclude the epic aspects of the film; but for i am love to truly have the work of art quality that we all expect, more of bellocchios work needs to be used to create the different worlds of his film. as it is, we see a great deal of the details of life in the recchi household, and the alchemy of the film is very visible. the unseen, it seems, creates the most powerful of characters.

I Am Love 2009 Movie 12

we saw i am love several months ago and loved the whole experience. from the film editing to the wild vistas of the central location, it's one of the most beautiful experiences we have had at bfi southbank, working with so many great people. because of its unique sound, this is a movie that works in every sense. set in the early 90s, this danish film is an intimate look into the world of a family who has survived the nazi occupation of denmark. this is a film that stands out in that respect with the cinematography that captured that era brilliantly. it's a very good movie in the audiovisual category. i liked the scene selection, where the director followed every detail of what life was like back then. of course he also managed to capture a certain smell and feel to certain places and cities that remained in our minds long after watching the film. it was a difficult movie to watch. i felt like the whole thing was one big written-out monologue and the main character couldn't decide what to do. the film told me a lot about being in one's 30s and being an unemployed dj in the suburbs. but i'm just a 30 year old unemployed dj. the movie was scary to watch and i really didn't like it. this isn't a movie that you will forget after the first viewing. the story is set in a house in stockholm, where a young couple start noticing that someone is secretly watching them through the webcams in their home. through the investigation that ensues, we learn of a night of unbelievable violence where an escaped convict is masquerading as a policeman to get into the house. in many ways, the movie feels like a romance in search of the answers of a mystery. but don't be misled. the mystery will not be answered in this movie, and the romance is definitely not the main focus. 5ec8ef588b
