Technical Field Embodiments of the present invention relate generally to digital rights management and, more particularly, to an apparatus and method for addressing the problem of a missing key in a public-key infrastructure (PKI). 2. Description of Related Art The advent of electronic rights management technologies like, for example, digital watermarking, Secure Hash Algorithms (SHA) and the like, and a move towards a more integrated, web-based business world, have forced companies to rethink their data protection strategies. After moving from a culture of control over data to a cultural of permission to data, electronic rights management systems must now manage a growing number of data types, many of them of high value, which can be in multiple formats and often carry multiple levels of permissions. This growth must be accompanied by an understanding of what constitutes the legal rights to, and the ability to enforce,
