Project Highrise V1.5.3 Fitgirl Repack

Release Date : Overview Project Highrise is a city simulation video game developed and published by The Highrise Group. It was released in 2004 and launched on the Xbox and PC platforms. In the game, players develop an urban environment using professional software with a development budget, allowing them to design their city. Contents The game's introduction has a parody of "The Sandman" by Eurythmics: "Now, it's a dark and stormy night, I'm looking at the lot in front... The developers want you to design a city. It's a difficult task, because the site is not only a city, but also a province, a nation, and a world. And now, the time has come to place the first stone." And it continues to the "City Highrise" theme. There are a total of four levels: Manhattan,

Hong Kong, Las Vegas and Rio de Janeiro. Players can choose a role that best fits their skills and play the game from a real-time strategy, city building, or sandbox game point of view. Players can customize their city using advanced technology to construct a variety of buildings, roads, and airports. They can also develop and expand their virtual urban environment by hiring workers, research new technologies, generate income, and increase the value of their businesses. The game is similar to the city-building game SimCity 2000. It was a game played in the middle of the 1990s.

The game uses Microsoft's Media Foundation framework and runs on Microsoft Windows. They also create the audio samples to play without any tech restriction. They created the game in C++ and DirectX 8. DirectX 8 is the graphic engine used to develop. The project was developed for 3 years with the full support of the industry and several reviews have given it credit for its well-designed and realistic 3D graphics, and its entertaining architecture. Game Review 8.07/10 - Eurogamer, "This is a 4-year-old game, but I can't remember the last time that I played something so professionally crafted. [Project Highrise] is a massive, complex role-player in all senses. It is a massive, complex, item-management sim in which you make decisions about what's built, when it's built and how to make money from it... all in the hope of making your virtual city viable for the long term."
