More than 700 Russian warplanes and naval ships have been rerouted away from a US-led military coalition against the Islamic State (Isis) from the Mediterranean Sea into the Black Sea, the US-led anti-IS coalition has said. The move followed threats by Russian President Vladimir Putin to target the US-led coalition, after the US navy downed a Syrian military aircraft and as tensions continue over the situation in Ukraine, the coalition said. The US has been providing its forces in Iraq and Syria with air cover since September 2014, when Russia began its air war in Syria. The Kremlin said it sent warplanes and ships from the Mediterranean Sea to the Black Sea after the US-led coalition fired at Syrian military planes entering Iraq's airspace. "The Russian command received information that aircraft and ships from the US-led coalition carried out air and naval strikes in the Syrian coastal waters and the eastern Mediterranean," the defence ministry said in a statement. After the US warned against the Russian air strikes in Syria, the Russian defence ministry said it would respond in kind – warning that any US missiles or drones that might be launched against Syria would be met with an appropriate response. "In the framework of this assumption, the Black Sea fleet from the Russian Federation has been sent to ensure security for Russian naval vessels engaged in providing naval support to the Syrian army in the fight against international terrorists near the country's coast," it said. It said the transfer of the fleet, which involves 69 planes and seven warships, followed "the Russian command's decision, based on the information it received, on the need to switch to the Black Sea fleet's zone of action, as a defensive measure to ensure security of the fleet's ships". The statement did not specify whether the flights and ships had already arrived in the Black Sea. The US-led coalition said it was withdrawing its forces from the Mediterranean Sea after a separate meeting with the Russian defence ministry in Ankara. "The coalition does not intend to conduct air operations against Syria from the Mediterranean Sea. Coalition and Russian defence officials decided that the location of the Combined Joint Task Force in the Mediterranean Sea is no longer appropriate for the US and Russian navies to operate together as part of the Global Coalition to defeat [Isis] in the counter-ISIL [Islamic State] campaign," the coalition said in a statement.

What's New in the Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.4.3)?

Photo of Private Eliot Fields released on Facebook and Twitter. After a year-and-a-half, Russia's largest media company, Sputnik International, has returned home, pulled down the chain, and posted the keys to their headquarters. Sputnik, a Russian news agency, fell into disfavor with President Trump and his national security advisors after the agency was discovered to have ties to Russia. It also has taken responsibility, via social media, for the delivery of classified information to WikiLeaks. The official reason for the move is to return the head office back to its home city. However, the reason is likely very different for each person involved. Jack Palance was found guilty of murdering his wife, played by Barbara Rush in the classic film western, "Shane," and received a mandatory death sentence. However, after appeals and protests, the execution was stayed and he was released from prison. While his sentence was commuted, he lived out the rest of his days with a large gang of happy followers. In a similar fashion, Sputnik founder, Alexey Panshin, sold the company for $600 million and signed off on the fraud of rolling it into a new public corporation, RT LLC. Many remain hopeful that Panshin's new company will continue to be Russia's mouthpiece against America. The company was once a victim of financial trouble and, after a restructuring, the new ownership adopted a different revenue model. The new owners divested themselves of most advertising, as such, the number of employees and the future of Sputnik appear to be very different than the Panshins'. In a recent interview with the Washington Post, Evan McMullin, a former presidential candidate, said, "Sputnik is in many ways emblematic of the Kremlin influence campaign against America."
