i was a little nervous going into the climb. alex lowe has always been an intimidating figure in the climbing world. when he first did sunshine crack i was convinced it was a grade harder than what it was rated in the guidebook. i was wrong of course, but the grade makes the climb sound more impressive than it is. it was one of the most nervous feelings i've had on a climb. i felt my heart race, my hands started to shake, and i was convinced i was going to chicken out. then i got to the first belay at the base of the route. i was able to relax and look up and see the start of pitch two. that's when i realized how easy it was. i was surprised and at that point it was over. sunshine crack is a great climb. i had the pleasure of climbing it in july of '08. i had little to no experience on alpine cracks and the first pitch of the climb scared the crap out of me. i was nervous about any alpine climbing at the time and this was a 5.10. just a few short pitches later i was ready to move and i smiled like i'd been climbing for years. at the top of pitch 2 i felt the need to celebrate and started to laugh out loud at how insane the climb was. the second to last pitch was the most strenuous and i was exhausted. i'd had the best alpine climb i'd ever done and i was still coming. then the sun set and the light almost left the mountains. the sun set and it was time to go. i've been climbing for 9 years now, and this may be the hardest climb i've ever done. the good news is it's the hardest climb i've ever done. after that climb i feel i understand the alpine cracks. i never felt like i was going to chicken out and i was very excited for the next climb.

sunshine is currently rated 5.12a with one aid, two bolts, and one rap anchor. the grade is obviously subjective, and my personal opinion is that it could be 5.11b. i would agree with the current atkinson and pich guidebook in saying it is one of the better climbs in the bugaboos. the crux roof and roof crack are both some of the best in the bugaboos. the finish is a moderate step off of the previous roof and brings you into the top-out. the start is straightforward, and the climbing is typical bugaboo granite with good holds, generous pockets, and some technical moves. alex lowe, who first climbed the route in 1980, said that he regarded it as a "classic high-end climb." steve house climbed it for the first time in 1991, and he wrote in rock and ice, "alex lowe's sunshine is a bouldery 5.11. just like the names says, this is an intense climb. it is another classic of bugaboo high-end climbing with an overhanging roof, sharp crimps, long traverses and the obvious aid line. i climbed it cleanly and it took me 45 minutes." the original route was named sunshine s, and the second version sunshine t. both routes start from the same small sloping ledge, and the second is the most popular and most climbed. steve backus climbed the route in 1991, which he said "was like climbing the gnarly thing on top of the eiffel tower." david stork climbed the route in 1993, and he said,

"it's a fun climb with some really good moves. the crux roof pitch is one of the hardest and most enjoyable pitches i have climbed. the fun, technical roof is one of my favorite pitches. i just wish there were more good holds." 5ec8ef588b
